"Tes, sir, your business," persisted the clerk.

"It is with the duke," was the answer.

"He has been suddealy summoned to Windsor, and Lord Wolseley's in bed with the mumps," ventured the young man, bent on carrying on his joke at the expense of this mexperienced stranger, as in deemed him.

"Your name, sir," demanded the stranger, in an imperative tone.

"My name is Plantaganet Zama, distant relation to her gracious majesty."

"Indeed! And mine is Sir Evelyn Wood. I am quarfermaster general of the forces, and I see now how her majesty is served."

The unfortunate clerk, who was not yet aware that his impudence had cost him dear, looked round with a grin, expecting to meet with appliance for his talent, and became suddealy aware that all his companions were working away with the most extraordinary carnestness.
